Your Cyber Security Manager on Call

Not every business can afford to take on a full-time cyber security manager. But that doesn't mean your business responsibilities go away.

And even if you have a cyber security manager in place, they may not be able to deal with the varied and complex work that comes their way.

Whether your business needs technical cyber security support, help with gaining security certifications to enable business growth, or help with embedding security into your business processes—we can help.

Our cyber security manager subscription service gives you the option of employing an experienced security manager when you need it without the complications and costs of recruiting a full-time member of staff.

It is the cost-effective way you can access cyber security skills or enhance your existing security support team with additional skills.

Reassurance for your customers

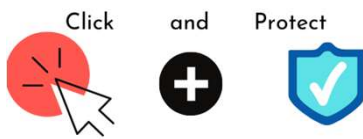

Confidence in your cyber security is increasingly important to business, whether you are selling products or services to individuals or businesses. It is especially important if you are handling customer data.

- We can help you become—and remain—certified against Cyber Essentials, Cyber Essentials+ or ISO 27001. And we can help you resolve any issues that a security audit raises.
- If you need to complete a third-party or supplier vendor assessment questionnaire as part of a bid response, we can help. We can review the security clauses in third party supplier contracts: those you receive and those you are sending out.
- And if you want to ensure that your supply chain is as secure as possible, and need to conduct supplier audits, we can help with that too.

Find out more about our subscription-based service that is designed to fit around your needs.
